Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Chats About the Newest Frocks for Children.

Last night I spent a pleasant evening at Mrs. Grunard's. She was showing some new models of children's clothes, and as she is a personal friend of Madame's, and knows that I'm keen on children's fashions, she invited me to this affair.

It was quite informal, and as one small, blue-eyed cherub prouetted about in a very dainty party frock Mrs. Grunard came and sat beside me for a few minutes.

"What do you think of this frock?" she asked eagerly.

"It's a darling little dress!" I exclaimed, "but I want you to tell me something more about the one that appeared before this."

"The flannel frock?" she smiled.

"It was a gray fabric, perhaps it was flannel. I really wasn't quite certain, but it was trimmed with yellow."

"I brought that dress from Paris. It's really a very simple little frock, but I'm sure that it will make a hit with my customers," said Madame with a smile.

Just then a very smartly dressed woman approached. Madame. I should have said that Mrs. Grunard charges an admission fee, which is turned over to one of her pet charities, and as this informal function is patronized by many of her customers the charity fund is often large.

"Would you tell me if that little gray frock with the cape could be made for a girl of 12?" she asked.

Mrs. Grunard smiled as she answered.

"Indeed it could, or in any other

This Gray Flannel Jumper Dress and Cape Have Yellow Trimings—The Hat Is of Yellow Felt.

color combination you desire."

"I'm so glad!" said the lady. "I shall come tomorrow and talk to you about it," and she walked out of the room.

"That must be a popular dress," I remarked, as Madame paused for a minute beside me.

"It is. Perhaps it's the color combination that proves so appealing, although if one wished, the yellow gumpe could be exchanged for a gumpe of rose or blue," said Mrs.

Grunard.

"What material is the gumpe made of?" I asked.

"Yellow muslin," answered my friend.

"The cape is charming for fall

weather, and I think the yellow buttons give it a pleasing touch of color," I remarked.

"Yes," replied Madame, "and I designed the yellow felt hat and the yellow tassel so that the costume would be complete in every detail."

"What other ideas are of special interest in children's apparel?" I asked.

"Well, we are making some frocks

of red jersey and knitted fabrics.

Red will, I believe, be popular during the fall and winter," answered

Madame.

"How are you trimming these models?" I asked.

"Generally with touches of embroidery. Sometimes with a little stitching of white wool or white facing. Black also looks well with the red, and some mothers prefer

this, as, of course, it doesn't show soil so quickly as white."

"How about dresses for older children?" I queried.

"Many of these are made with the

overblouse, as this style seems much liked," said Madame, rising to greet another friend.

Having finished my sketch of the flannel frock, I soon went home, as I had seen so many new ideas I wanted to tell you about them before I forgot them.

Tomorrow's

HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY AND MONDAY.

Sunday's horoscope holds some interesting features in the way of mental or spiritual experience. The mind may lean toward metaphysical, psy-chical or occult investigation, with conditions favorable under Uranian and Neptunian forces.

Those whose birthday it is may thrive best in mental or inspirational pursuits. A child born on this day may have a bent for the occult and meditation, with interesting mental gifts, which should lead to success.

Monday's astrological map gives promise of some very interesting and fortunate developments after a long term of critical circumstances.

"Flourishing and happy conditions are presaged in mercantile, domestic and social affluence. In romantic affairs the situation is particularly brilliant under the dominant rule of Venus.

Those whose birthday it is may

look for a happy and prosperous year—with all matters flourishing.

A child born on this day will be popular, ambitious, talented and rather fortunate.

No Punctures

No Blowouts

SOONER or later you are bound to equip your car with

ESSENKAY, the remarkable substitute for air in automobile tires. Why not now? Every day without it means additional expense, worry and loss of time and pleasure.

ESSENKAY

ENDS TIRE TROUBLES

ESSENKAY rides like air on smooth roads—does away with air over rough roads. It positively does away with punctures and "blowouts" those costly and annoying incidents of automotive travel. Saves half your tire expense.

Double the life of your casing; an investment and an expense—the first cost of ESSENKAY is the last cost, as it is indestructible and can be transferred from one set of casings to another indefinitely.
